Keith Brown brings a unique in-depth blend of technology and communities development to the table. He grew up in the broadcasting and electronics industries, moving into computing in the mid-1970s. After running his own computer consulting firm for 30 years, specializing in custom integrated multi-user business applications including accounting, CRM, asset management, POS, Inventory, and HR... he most recently is moving the technology to the Web 2-3 user interface. He has participated as a founder of several computing start-ups, and has a wide variety of high profile customers, from Epson America, to CH2MHill, Les Schwab Tires, and Hollywood Video. Recent positions is VP and Chief Technology Architect with FohBoh, Inc., the leading social media company for the foodservice industry, and CTO of QuikFitApp.com, a gamifying app for promoting physical fitness.

In the realm of community building, Mr. Brown has been involved in developing and producing Network For a New Culture's intentional community workshops and camps for the last 20 years. He is one of the team that puts on the annual Art of Community conference sponsored by the Fellowship for Intentional Community; and also serves on the convening team for the 11th Continental Bioregional Congress. He also, with his partner, leads community building workshops. Lastly, Mr. Brown has been a Ranger at Burning Man (2008-2012).

Mr. Brown is a past-president of the Oregon Computer Consultants Association, a former member of the Audio Engineering Society, SMPTE, and for the past four years worked with FohBoh in focusing and developing its next-generation Social Media tools. He is currently involved in the HTML5 and CSS3 implementations. Mr. Brown is an active participant in the Drupal, HTML5, JavaScript, MySQL, and jQuery Meetup groups in the Bay area.

At FohBoh, Mr. Brown led the development of four overall system revisions, the technical creation of FohBoh Brand Central, and invented and implemented the FohBoh Membership Manager, a unique software environment creating seamless member-asset management (single login) across disparate feature and service provider platforms. Current projects revolve around Social Media metrics tools, sentiment analysis, and the launching of FohBohWine.

Keith is open to both 1099 and W-2 contracts.
